4 次の英文は、中学生の陸(Riku)が、同級生の健(Ken)とのできごとを振り返って書いたものである。この英文を読んで、(1)~(7)の問いに答えなさい。(16点)

Ken is my best friend. When he was in elementary school, he lived in Canada, so he can speak English well.

One day in June, in English class, our teacher said, "Six students from America will come to our school next month. Let's explain Japanese traditional events to them. We'll practice a little today." I thought it sounded easy to introduce Japanese events because I was interested in Japanese culture. In groups, each student chose one Japanese event and *made a presentation in English to their group. I talked about Hatsu-hinode. I had many things to say about the event, but I didn't know the English words. So, in my presentation, I only said, "Many people enjoy ^a(see) the *sunrise on January first." Ken talked about Tanabata. He said, "In July, we write our hopes and dreams on paper. That's everything I know." He didn't speak a lot, so I was surprised.

After that class, I talked to Ken. He said, "I've joined some Japanese events, but I about them." Then, I said, "Actually, I couldn't say everything that I knew because of my English. I wish I could talk in English about .

 Then, Ken said, "Let's study together. I will help you. Also, I'm sure that I can learn many things from you."

On weekends, before the American students arrived, I went to Ken's house. We chose an event and talked about it in Japanese. Ken asked me various questions. For example, "Why do we have that event?" and "When did it start?" I answered his questions. When I didn't know the answer, we used a computer to get information. Then, we practiced explaining the Japanese event in English. It was hard for me to speak about it in English, but Ken helped me. He taught me how to say the English words that I didn't know. When I was talking about Setsubun, I asked him, "How do you say mame-maki in English?" He answered, "Throwing beans." He also *corrected my English. I could explain some Japanese events in English .

On July first, the students from America ^b(come) to our school. Ken and I were in the same group. An American girl asked Ken about an event and he explained it very well. After his *explanation, Ken said, "Riku knows a lot. You can ask him, too." Then, she asked me about Bon-odori. I talked about its history. After my explanation, I thought, "I could explain the event well because it was one of the topics that we practiced together on weekends."

After the English class, Ken said to me, "Through this experience, I understand the importance of knowing about our culture." Then, I said, "Yes. And I understand that it's necessary to learn other languages to talk with foreign people. I think the things we learned through this experience are very important."
